WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

GREGORY WAKEMAN, FEATURES REPORTER

The nominations for the 90th Academy Awards were announced bright and early Tuesday morning, and it was the nautical love story between a mute and a sea creature that reigned victorious. Guillermo del Toro's "The Shape Of Water" landed 13 nominations, four more than the next closest contender — critic favorite "Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri," which came in with nine. But there were a glut of surprises and delights, all of which you can read about on page 7.

TWO KILLED IN KENTUCKY HIGH SCHOOL SHOOTING

A 15-year-old boy opened fire with a handgun in his high school in western Kentucky on Tuesday, killing two fellow students and wounding a dozen other youths before being arrested, the state's governor and police said. The shooting began shortly before 8 a.m. local time at Marshall County High School in Benton, a small town about 130 miles northwest of Nashville, Tennessee, according to Kentucky State Police and Gov. Matt Bevin. Authorities offered no information on the motive behind the shooting. There was no immediate indication how well the youth, who officials said faces multiple charges of murder and attempted murder, knew the victims. "There's no good answer for it," Bevin told reporters at an afternoon news conference. Five of the wounded students were taken to the Vanderbilt University Medical Center's trauma center.

FACEBOOK BUYS BOSTON SOFTWARE FIRM

Facebook Inc. is buying a software firm that specializes in authenticating government-issued identification cards, the two companies said on Tuesday, a step that may help the social media giant learn more about the people who buy ads on its network. U.S. lawmakers have expressed alarm at Facebook's limited ability to know who is buying advertisements, including election-related ads, on the world's largest social network. Boston-based Confirm Inc., which is privately held, said on its website that the acquisition was the culmination of three years of work to build technology to keep people safe online. Facebook said in a statement that Confirm's "technology and expertise will support our ongoing efforts to keep our community safe." Terms of the deal and how Facebook would apply Confirm's software were not revealed.

NH MAN BITES POLICE DOG, GETS ARRESTED

A New Hampshire man was arrested for biting a police dog while officers were investigating reports of a shooting in the town of Boscawen, police officials said on Tuesday. The incident unfolded on Sunday when police reported to a home where they were told a person had been shot. Two people at the home were wanted on outstanding warrants and tried to flee when police attempted to arrest them, said

Lt. Jason Killary of the Boscawen Police Department. "Both of them resisted arrest and one very strongly resisted arrest. He bit the dog, the dog bit him, he ended up getting Tasered," Killary said. The suspect, who was not identified, was charged with resisting arrest and assault on a police dog. The dog, identified on the New Hampshire Canine Trooper's Association Facebook page as K9 Veda, was uninjured.

AG SESSIONS QUESTIONED IN RUSSIA PROBE

Attorney General Jeff Sessions was questioned last week by the special counsel's office investigating potential collusion between Russia and President Donald Trump's 2016 presidential campaign, the Justice Department said on Tuesday. The interview marked the first time that special counsel Robert Mueller's office is known to have interviewed a member of Trump's cabinet, and is another milestone in an investigation that has hung over Trump's year-old presidency. Mueller's office also interviewed former Federal Bureau of Investigation Director James Comey shortly after Trump fired Comey in May 2017, a person familiar with the matter said. Comey's firing led to Mueller's appointment by the Justice Department's No. 2 official, Rod Rosenstein, to take over the FBI's Russia investigation.

Boston mayor exploring legal action against drug companies for opioid crisis

Marty Walsh is weighing litigation against drug makers for what he says is their role in the opioid epidemic.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Mayor Marty Walsh is considering suing pharmaceutical companies for their role in the opioid epidemic.

Drug companies "irresponsibly saturated the market with opiates, knowingly putting consumers at risk for addiction," Walsh's office said in a statement.

In Boston alone, there were 207 opioid-related deaths in 2016, up from 70 in 2012, according to the Massachusetts Department of Health. Statewide, the department estimates about 2,190 Massachusetts residents died from opioid-related overdoses in 2016 — the highest number ever recorded here.

"I strongly believe that the pharmaceutical industry is the main offender and sustainer of the opioid crisis," Walsh said in a statement. "Their distribution and marketing of narcotics is unforgivably reckless, causing irreversible devastation to our families and significant damages to cities nationwide."

Boston would not be the first city to seek such litigation. Quincy became the first in the state to sue pharmaceutical companies in November and other cities like Chicago, Seattle, Indianapolis and Cincinnati have all taken legal action against pharmaceutical companies.

"In Boston, we are addressing the opioid crisis from every angle, from creating the first municipal recovery office to investing in more services and building a state-of-the-art recovery facility on Long Island," Walsh added. "Now is the time to finally hold the pharmaceutical industry responsible."

Walsh established an Office of Recovery Status

during his first term as mayor. This office, the first and only municipal recovery office in the nation, according to his office, studies substance abuse in the city and helps build the city's strategies around substance use disorders, addiction and recovery.

The city has been meeting with law firms over the past few months, Walsh's office said, to collect information in preparation for the potential litigation.

To formally start the legal process, Walsh will issue a Request for Information on Monday, Feb. 5 to hear from law firms, researchers and "other interested parties that would inform the city's approach to potential opioid litigation."

Swearing could improve your physical performance, study finds

Need a power boost when doing something intense? Say some curse words, and it might help.

If you've ever let out an F-bomb or two while doing something strenuous (and who among us hasn't?), keep the curses coming — it's not vulgar language, it's a scientifically proven power boost, according to new research.

A study recently published in the Journal of Psychology of Sports and Exercise found that swearing out loud can increase your physical performance and strength.

Dr. David Spierer of Long Island University Brooklyn and Dr. Richard Stephens of Keele University in the United Kingdom collaborated on a study about the special power of swear words.

Using their respective two labs (one in the United States, one in England) they looked at the connection between curse words and physical performance, building off of Stephens' previous research that showed the benefits of swearing.

Participants in the U.S. completed an intense 30-second stationary bike test twice — once while swearing and once while saying a "neutral" word (they were instructed to pick a word that could describe a table, like "flat" or "round").

When cursing, participants saw about a 4.6 percent improvement in power.

"That may not seem

Need a boost of strength when doing something intense? Try swearing, researchers say. ISTOCK like a lot if you look at it out of 100," Spierer said, "but when looking at what 5 percent does for revolutions-per-minute, that is the difference [for an athlete] between first and second place, no doubt."

In the U.K., study participants did a handgrip strength test and saw an 8.2 percent increase in strength while swearing — or the difference, Spierer described, between being able to open that pesky jar of pickles or not.

Participants weren't yelling out the curse words at full force or with a "violent" way either, Spierer said. To keep that factor controlled, they methodically said a curse (the most common chosen was the F-word) every three seconds in a "conversational" tone.

Methodically cursing, and studying that, may seem silly, Spierer acknowledged, but it's serious science.

"When we swear, we don't use the area of the brain that we use for language," he said. "So there is something else going on when we swear, that our brain is telling us either this is taboo or I'm distracting myself from something else."

4.6%

WHEN CURSING, PARTICIPANTS SAW ABOUT A 4.6 PERCENT IMPROVEMENT IN POWER, WHICH CAN MAKE THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN FIRST AND SECOND PLACE FOR AN ATHLETE, ACCORDING TO DR. DAVID SPIERER.

Franco's no Weinstein

Sarah Tither-Kaplan and Violet Paley — two women who have accused James Franco of sexual misconduct — appeared on Good Morning America on Tuesday morning, detailing Franco's inappropriate behavior.

Tither-Kaplan explained that Franco's main sin is creating an environment where women could easily be exploited. "James abused his power by exploiting the non-celebrity women that he worked with under the guise of giving them opportunities," she said. "[He] is absolutely not a Harvey Weinstein. He is not an unfeeling monster who has no sense of reality."

She also said that the best way for the 39-year-old to make retribution would be to use his celebrity for good — namely "using his power to give opportunities to women that are real and valuable and actually give them career advancement." She added, "He's not an unforgivable person, at least for me."

Paley simply says she's ready for Franco to apologize already.

Here's hoping Franco is listening.

Listen up, Franco.

Bella is SO bad!

Bella Thorne was kicked out of a hotel for smoking marijuana. Sure!

Page Six reports that the 20-year-old and her entourage were removed from their hotel in Park City, Utah, on Sunday, after being caught smoking the good stuff. Thorne is at Sundance to promote "Assassination Nation," a film that is actually getting good reviews.

"They were seen rushing out of the hotel hours before the premiere," a source on the scene said. "There were so many bags they needed a trail car to carry them."

The next day, Thorne called in sick for most of her press interviews for whatever reason. Probably to prove she's a badass!

Because, as we all know, the best way to prove that you're really a "wild child" isn't to get your Lindsay Lohan circa her hot mess years (RIP) on, but to smoke weed and to not show up for your job. OK!

Luann is doing great, BTW

After an arrest for battery and intoxication and a stint in rehab, Luann de Lesseps has returned to New York.

"It's good to be home," she wrote on Twitter. "I'm doing great. Spending time with friends and family. Thanking everyone for your continued good wishes and support."

If you, like me, know nothing about the Countess or the "Real Housewives of New York," here's the deal: de Lesseps was arrested on December 24 in Palm Beach, Florida.

Her charges included battery on a law enforcement officer (dang), resisting arrest with violence (oh, man), disorderly intoxication (no big) and corruption by threat (damn, son).

Afterward, she voluntarily checked into rehab, telling Us Weekly she was embarrassed of her behavior and had therefore decided to seek professional help.

Well, damn, girl. Good on you for making a change. I'd cheers to you, but that would be unhelpful, probably.

The 2018 Oscar nominations are actually impressive

A look at the most surprising nominations and snubs.

GREGORY WAKEMAN

collecting 13 — four ahead of its closest rival, frontrunner "Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri."

But while Guillermo del Toro and Martin McDonagh's films were widely expected to be in the running for the top gongs, there were plenty of surprises when the nominations were announced by "Girls Trip" breakout Tiffany Haddish and motion capture star Andy Serkis.

The most startling (but arguably most welcome) news was the omission of James Franco from the Best Actor list for his performance in "The Disaster Artist." Franco was expected to at least be in the running after he picked up the Golden Globe for Best Actor in a Comedy earlier this month.

But the five sexual assault allegations made against the actor scuttled his Oscar hopes. "The Disaster Artist" only picked up one nomination, for Best Adapted Screenplay.

Another film that was surprisingly overlooked? "The Post." Sure, it walked away with two high-profile nominations — one for Best Picture category and an obligatory Best Actress nod for Meryl Streep — but director Steven Spielberg and lead actor Tom Hanks were not recognized for their work on the film.

The Academy does deserve some credit for the diversity in its nominations: Daniel Kaluuya ("Get Out") and Denzel Washington ("Roman J. Israel, Esq.") will go head-to-head in the Best Actor field; Mary J. Blige ("Mudbound") and Octavia Spencer ("The Shape of Water") are both nominated for Best Supporting Actress; and Guillermo del Toro ("The Shape of Water"), Greta Gerwig ("Lady Bird") and Jordan Peele ("Get Out") are all up for Best Director.

All of which means that the 90th Academy Awards have taken shape quite nicely.

Can brilliant Belichick solve the Philly riddle?

Belichick will have to put together a masterful offensive and defensive game plan to beat the Eagles.

MATTHEW BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Bill Belichick is regarded by casual football fans as one of the greatest defensive minds in NFL history.

But over the past 25 years or so, Belichick has become so much more than that. The Hooded One has his hand in his team's offense just as much as the defense — and for the past 10 years or so in New England the offense has been the team's calling card much more than the D.

Belichick, first and foremost, has helped Tom Brady greatly in his evolution as a quarterback. Brady spent the early portion of his Patriots career as a "dink-and-dunk" QB, then went all bombs-away in 2007 with Randy Moss, and now he's a perfect blend of all things quarterbacking.

Brady's offensive coordinators have all helped in this evolution, but Belichick himself has been the consistent voice in Brady's ear year after year.

Brady's most conservative years as a QB came under the guidance of former OC Charlie Weiss from 2000-2004. His aforementioned 2007 year (50 touchdowns, just 8 interceptions) and his most recent success has come under the offensive leadership of Josh McDaniels. The Pats never won a Super Bowl with Bill O'Brien calling plays, but O'Brien was the default OC in 2010 when Brady won his second MVP and defensive guru.

Cream Philly

Montilio's Bakery has banned all Philadelphia Cream Cheese products from its bakeries with the hometown Patriots set to face off against the Philadelphia Eagles in the Super Bowl a week from Sunday. This comes as a result of the city of Philadelphia banning Boston Cream Pie and Boston Cream donuts. Montilio's is now using cream cheese from Wisconsin.

had his most efficient season statistically (36 TD passes and an incredible four interceptions all season).

All offensive plays are run through Belichick, though, (he has the final say in everything) and Belichick has a weekly one-on-one meeting with Brady in his office to discuss the upcoming opponent. At this point in his career, Belichick is just as much a genius offensive mind as he is a

Can BB beat the Birds?

In the upcoming Super Bowl against the Eagles, Belichick will face off against Philly defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz — who was on his staff in Cleveland way back when.

It's difficult to say if that will be an advantage for Belichick, who has an average record (for him) against former assistants. Belichick is "just" 13-8 against former staffers as head coaches.

When Schwartz was head coach of the Detroit Lions, Belichick's Pats only faced him once — in a 2010 Thanksgiving Day game. It was an impressive victory for the Pats that day as they rolled, 45-24, and in it Brady had one of his most efficient days ever, going 21-of-24 for 341 yards with four touchdowns and zero picks.

Schwartz also served as the Tennessee Titans defensive coordinator from 2001-08, and as the Buffalo Bills' DC in 2014. In games in which Schwartz served as either head coach or DC, Belichick is 4-2 (one of the losses came in a Week 17 game in which the Pats sat Brady for the second half).

That history against Schwartz teams is good news for Pats fans, but make no mistake — Belichick will need one of his all-time game plans to silence the Eagles, who seemingly do everything well. The Ringer's Mike Lombardi, who also has served on Belichick's staff in the past, believes the Eagles have the right formula to dethrone Belichick and the Pats.

"I'm gonna pick Philadelphia to win the Super Bowl," Lombardi said on his GM Street podcast. "I think it's a horrendous matchup for New England [with the Eagles' front four on defense]. What Jacksonville did in the first half (on offense) was run a Kansas City style of offense — spread the field, force you to play inside with power, and then attack the edges — that's been the kryptonite for New England ... and that's what Philly does all the time."

It won't be easy, but if any football mind can solve the Eagles riddle this season — it's Belichick.

Aries Discipline will pay off. Set your goals and don't veer off course. What you accomplish will speak volumes about the kind of person you are. Be a doer, not a talker.

Taurus Don't let the little setbacks get you down. Added discipline and desire will take you in a direction that will result in greater satisfaction and an unexpected reward.

Gemini Put a hold on excessive behavior and start looking into investments that will help stabilize your life and financial future. Put your money into something concrete.

Cancer Focus on your accomplishments and working alongside people you feel can offer you much. Success will come if you let your creative imagination flow.

Leo Emotional distress is likely to develop if you can't agree with someone you work or play with. Be willing to compromise if you want to get something accomplished.

Virgo Attend a conference or set up a meeting with someone you feel has something to offer. Avoid making emotional decisions that could alter your personal agenda.

Libra Making home improvements or alterations to your living arrangements, or lowering your overhead are apparent. Refuse to let your emotions lead to a poor decision.

Scorpio The desire for change will overpower you if you let your imagination take control and your ideas grow disproportionately to your budget. Look for cheap solutions.

Sagittarius Don't feel you must follow the crowd. Protect against anyone trying to get you to invest in anything that doesn't benefit you directly.

Capricorn Getting along with friends, relatives and peers will not be easy if you let your emotions take the reins. Don't act in haste when a practical strategy is required.

Aquarius Willfulness will help you overcome any obstacles you encounter. Taking physical action to reach your goal will send a message to anyone trying to stand in your way.

Pisces A little Pisces charm and power of persuasion can go a long way. Aim to get ahead using all your attributes, experience and skills. EUGENIA LAST
